This study describes a new method for the analysis of cinnamic acids, stilbenoids and anthocyanidins in berry extracts using an ultra-high performance liquid chromatography (UHPLC)-diode array detection (DAD) system coupled to electrospray ionization-high-resolution mass spectrometry (ESI-HRMS). A linear calibration curve was obtained from the 1.0-10.0 µg/mL concentration range for all quantitated compounds ( $r > 0.99$ ), with coefficients of determination ( $R^2$ )  $> 0.99$ . The precision (RSD %) values were in all cases less than 5.1%, and the accuracy (RE %) values varied between -8.8% and 7.5%. The fortified extracts were assessed at levels of 50, 100, and 150 µg/g of each compound with intra-day and inter-day precision and recovery values always lower than 15.6%. The use of matrix-matched calibration standards in combination with the matrix-matched internal standardisation approach was validated in terms of stability, repeatability, reproducibility and recovery and achieved for the first time simultaneously the
